Talks start on Saturday

PARIS (AP) — Heart-of-the-matter talks on peace in Vietnam will begin Saturday with Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, President Nixon's appointee as chief delegate, sitting in.

U.S. officials announced Tuesday the decision to open the talks then after secret contacts with the North Vietnamese delegation.

North Vietnam said in a communique that Hanoi and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front accepted the American proposal to meet for the first time Saturday on matters of substance. The North Vietnamese and their allies had proposed the meeting be held Tuesday.

The United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the NLF will begin their historic first substantive session at 10:30 a.m. in a huge former ballroom at the International Conference Center. The meeting will be the result of more than eight months of laborious negotiation in Paris.

The forthcoming meetings will take up such questions as a cease-fire, a political settlement, and withdrawal of foreign troops.

After a sudden rules breakthrough last Saturday, the first meeting had been scheduled for early this week. But the schedule ran into complications connected with the change of administrations in the United States and delay in the arrival here of South Vietnam's vice president, Nguyen Cao Ky. Ky supervises South Vietnam's delegation.

Lodge, who arrived in Paris Monday night to succeed Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, held a working session of less than an hour Tuesday with the South Vietnamese allies at their headquarters, about three hours before the decision on the opening was made public.

South Vietnam's chief negotiator will be Ambassador Pham

Dang Lam assisted by his deputy, Nguyen Xuan Phong. North Vietnam will be represented by its chief negotiators, Ambassador Xuan Thuy and Col. Ha Van Lau, and the NLF by Tran Huu Kiem and Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh.

Each head of delegation is expected on the first day to make a general statement laying forth in detail the policy, claims and aims of his side.

By agreement between the Americans and the North Vietnamese, there will be no wrangling over an agenda. Each delegation will be free to take up matters of war and peace as it sees fit and present them for general discussion.

Pick Negro for duty in JFK trial

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A grey-haired Negro was sworn Tuesday as the first juror for the trial of Clay L. Shaw, charged with conspiring to murder President John F. Kennedy.

Irvin Mason, 48, a machine operator at a sulphur company here, survived two hours of rigorous questioning by state and defense lawyers.

Mason's replies were legal perfection. He had read little about the celebrated case, discussed it sparingly, saw none of the television shows based on it, had no opinions about it and didn't mind if the trial took two months.

In winding up his interrogation, chief defense lawyer F. Irvin Dymond leaned back, regarded Mason with a perplexed frown and asked: "You want to be a juror on this case, do you not?"

Mason had no chance to answer. Judge Edward A. Haggerty Jr. of Criminal District Court intervened and said, "He wants to do his civic duty as a citizen."

Prayer Week stirs some controversy

GENEVA (AP) — A world-wide week of prayer for Christian unity is developing some controversy as well as ecumenical accord.

Among hundreds of interdenominational pulp exchanges thus far, the Greek Orthodox Archbishop Iakovos has preached in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, and a Roman Catholic priest has held the spotlight at a former Calvinist stronghold in Geneva.

A British Roman Catholic, Cardinal John Heenan, is slated to preach in St. Paul's Protestant Cathedral in London today.

These events, and many more, herald unprecedented steps forward in the ecumenical cause. The week of prayer is sponsored by the Geneva-based World Council of Churches and the Vatican Secretariat for Christian Unity.

Captured Red goods increase

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Command reported Tuesday that allied forces captured enemy weapons, munitions and supplies in the past 24 days at a rate exceeding even the bonanza figures of 1968.

From Dec. 28 to Jan. 20, it said, American, South Vietnamese and South Korean troops seized 110 tons of armaments and 489 tons of rice.

Most of this vast storehouse was taken from caches in the 3rd Corps Tactical Zone, the military region that includes Saigon. In recent months this has been the area of greatest enemy activity, possibly a prelude to a major offensive.

The interim report on the capture of enemy supplies came amid stepped-up enemy shelling and terror attacks in the last three days. In the most daring of these attacks, enemy gunners operating in daylight fired eight 122mm rockets into a U.S. Army airfield and a Navy pier complex at the seaside resort city of Vung Tau, 40 miles from Saigon, Tuesday morning.

An updated report on the attack said two U.S. sailors were killed and 14 wounded, all aboard the landing ship Tom Greene County, which was moored at the pier.

U.S. officers believe the attacks, concentrated in the 3rd Corps and the Mekong Delta to the south, are not necessarily part of an offensive but more likely an enemy show of strength timed to coincide with the inauguration of President Nixon and the opening of enlarged peace talks in Paris.

In Saigon, a high police official said police held captured enemy documents saying in effect that current terrorist acts, such as two grenade incidents in the capital that wounded eight Americans in the last two days, are aimed only at U.S. personnel.

The official said he interpreted this as part of an effort by the enemy to "arouse emotion among the American public," to aid bargaining in Paris, and to show Vietnamese that they are not the principal targets of terror.

He said large numbers of police, including plain-clothesmen, had been deployed through Saigon to counter terrorism.

Three living ex-presidents

WASHINGTON (AP) — For only the second time since 1885 the United States has three living former presidents.

They are Harry S. Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower and Lyndon B. Johnson.

In 1961, when John F. Kennedy was inaugurated, there were also three: Herbert Hoover, Truman and Eisenhower.

Pueblo skipper relates story of being outgunned by Reds

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The captain of the Pueblo said Tuesday it was hopelessly outgunned with "no hope of outrunning" the North Korean gunboats that attacked the intelligence ship just before its capture.

He said he radioed his plight to the Navy command in Japan and, ultimately, to the White House.

When the boats closed in and pointed guns at his ship, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher testified he said "I'll be damned if they're going to get away with that," and he tried to maneuver away from them.

The 41-year-old Navy officer spoke calmly to the five admirals comprising a board of inquiry into the Pueblo's capture and the 11-month imprisonment of its crew. But he appeared emotionally drained when he finished.

It was just before noon last Jan. 23 when a lone boat headed toward them on the Sea of Japan and circled, guns manned, as he signaled he was making hydrographic tests in international waters, Bucher said.

Soon three torpedo boats, then a fourth, approached to point blank range as he radioed his plight to Japan and later to the White House in Washington.

Bucher said he thought it was just harassment, but he ordered secret items destroyed and got under way to try to get away. To man the Pueblo's machine-guns, he said, would have meant "certain death" for the gunner. Bucher said his defiance of a "a heave to or be fired upon" order caused the North Koreans to open fire and he and others were hit by shrapnel.

He was to continue his testimony Wednesday with details of the ship's capture.

Bucher said earlier his assignment was to conduct surveillance of Soviet ships in the Sea of Japan and monitor North Korean radar, but he saved the surveillance until the last and was captured before he got to it.

When the first ship, a sub-chaser, was sighted seven or eight miles away Bucher ordered the Pueblo's position confirmed.

Negro students erect PSU wall

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — About 90 Negro students, each carrying one or two bricks, filed silently into the outer office of Pennsylvania State University President Eric Walker Tuesday and built a small triangular wall in front of the desks of dumb founded secretaries.

"The wall is a symbol," said William F. ("Rick") Collins, who organized the procession. "It symbolizes the distance between the administration and the black student body."

Collins is the president of the Douglas Association, which claims to represent all of the university's approximately 300 black students.

The students issued a statement rejecting a report Walker made Monday saying the university was trying to increase its Negro enrollment. Collins, a 22-year-old senior from Philadelphia, said there would be no more meetings between the Douglas Association and the university.

The wall contained 132 red bricks. It was topped by one black brick. A note was left on it. It said: "Next time we won't build a wall."

About 15 white students, who were waiting outside, entered the administration building after the Negro students left. They left a note on the wall, too. It said: "This wall is not only black—we're here, too." A university spokesman said a number of officers from the Students for a Democratic Society were in the white group.

The Negro students were in the building for only a few minutes. Walker was not in his office at the time.

"After a careful study of Walker's statement, we have found it full of evasion, paternalism and lies," Collins said.

"We feel there is no other recourse for us, except outside of meeting with Walker," he said.

Collins said there were many other avenues open to the group but declined to state the alternatives.

Human relations group to examine school role

HARRISBURG (AP) — The new chairman of the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission said Tuesday that present functions of the anti-discrimination agency, including its controversial move into the area of racial imbalance in schools, would be re-examined.

"We shall re-examine and re-evaluate the role and function of the commission," Max Rosen, Wilkes-Barre attorney, told newsmen following its first meeting since being reconstituted by Gov. Shafer.

Rosen, a former secretary of public welfare, was hesitant to elaborate on his statement, which came in reply to a reporter's question concerning a commission order that 17 school districts end conditions of racial imbalance.

The order, issued last February, had granted Philadelphia its third extension of the deadline for submitting a plan, which had been due by the end of this month. No new deadline was set, but Rosen said the commission would meet with the city's school

Decides changes should be made

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon buckled down to business early Tuesday on his first complete day as President and quickly decided there ought to be some changes.

For one thing, he said he is going to use the oval presidential office in the White House west wing for formal purposes and take over a smaller room across the street as a kind of think tank for what he called "brainwork."

And for another—and former President Lyndon B. Johnson probably wouldn't understand this—he ordered the removal from the presidential office of news service teletype machines and a three-set television panel on which Johnson could watch all three networks at once.

The new President explained he gets a news summary every morning. Johnson used to hover over the teletype machines and use a remote control gadget to flick the TV sets from channel to channel.

The President and Mrs. Nixon didn't get to bed until around 2:30 at the end of their great day—the day of Nixon's inauguration, which included a parade down Pennsylvania Avenue, and making the rounds of inaugural balls at six different spots.

Press secretary Ron Ziegler said the President was up around 6:45, had his customary breakfast of orange juice, oatmeal and coffee, and was at his desk by 7:30 asking for staff members.

And the new President told reporters that is about the way things will go from now on. He said National Security Council meetings will be held at 9 and Cabinet sessions at 10.

In the way of chores Tuesday, Nixon pored through some papers with Dr. Henry Kissinger, his national security chief, in preparation for a council meeting later on. He sent to the Senate 20 nominations previously announced—mainly for under-secretaries of various departments and other upper level posts.

Ziegler said Tuesday's Security Council meeting had before it some information Nixon had requested for background guidelines. The President had asked advisers to supply him, for example, with realistic alternatives on what could be done about the war in Vietnam and other problems. He asked for the information by Jan. 20 and Ziegler said he got it and the reports were turned over to Kissinger.

LBJ stalks deer back at ranch

STONEWALL, Tex. (AP) — While President Nixon chased the problems of the world Tuesday, Lyndon Johnson chased deer in his Lincoln Continental convertible.

Johnson apparently rested most of the morning on his first day in five years as leader of only a tiny part of the Free World—the LBJ Ranch. Brilliant sunshine bathed the Hill Country.

Johnson drove across the Pedernales River to the LBJ State Park shortly before noon and spent a few minutes looking at the glass and stone exhibit hall under construction. He avoided newsmen. Secret Service men followed him.

Johnson then drove back across the Pedernales and entered the east side of his ranch where herds of deer are penned in by an eight-foot high fence.

Newsmen watched as he cut across a live oak pasture, flushing the deer into the open and giving chase for a mile or more. The Secret Service car kept pace.

Two or three other persons rode with Johnson. They could not be identified.

He arrived at the ranch Monday night.

Chromosome theory nears court test

NEW YORK (AP) — A rare court test has been set of the scientific theory that an extra male chromosome can produce aggressive, antisocial behavior beyond a person's control.

The case concerns a Brooklyn lithographer charged with a rape-slashing. He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, arguing that he was not responsible for his actions partly because he has an extra male chromosome.

His attorney, Marvin Kornberg, said Tuesday he knows of no other test of the theory set for trial in this country.

There have been trials centering on the argument in France and Australia and a hearing on the subject in Los Angeles, but the legal question is unresolved.

There are 46 chromosomes in the human cell. These tiny, threadlike strands contain the genes that determine heredity, the stuff of life that controls the color of eyes, the intellect, the person.

Hickel still Nixon 'outsider'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon encountered his first Senate roadblock Tuesday when action was delayed for at least another 24 hours on his nomination of Walter J. Hickel to be secretary of the interior.

Nixon's 11 other Cabinet members are scheduled to be sworn in at a White House ceremony Wednesday, and there were indications the President had hoped Hickel would win Senate confirmation in time to make the roster complete.

However, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana told reporters that objection was raised to taking up Hickel's nomination until the record of a five day hearing by the Senate Interior Committee is available, along with the committee's report.

These will not be ready until today at the earliest, and Mansfield said Senate debate on Hickel's qualifications may take a day or two.

Mansfield declined to say who raised the objection, although he said it was not one of the three Interior Committee members who voted against recommending confirmation of the Alaska governor.

The committee voted 14 to 3 in favor of confirmation, and there has been no suggestion that the Senate will not go along with the majority recommendation when it gets around to acting.

The three opposing votes were cast by Sens. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, and Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis. They contended Hickel lacks the background and sense of commitment the nation's chief conservationist should have. McGovern said there are no plans for a full-scale floor fight, however, in view of the lopsided committee vote.

Fulbright awaits 'go' on treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is ready to move quickly on the long-stalled nuclear proliferation treaty but is awaiting word the Nixon administration wants prompt action.

The committee is ready to reopen hearings on the issue as early as next week if President Nixon indicates he favors a go-ahead, congressional sources report.

Nixon has expressed support for the goals of the pact to curb the spread of nuclear weapons. But, during his election campaign, he opposed immediate Senate ratification because of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

He has since said he wants to appraise the treaty in the light of current conditions.

Nixon's pre-election opposition set the lead for many GOP senators and was considered a key factor in the decision against bringing the treaty to a vote before the 90th Congress ended last October.

Failure to win Senate ratification of the treaty was said to have been a major disappointment to former President Lyndon B. Johnson in his final months in office.

Top Czechs discourage students

PRAGUE (AP) — Students demanding reforms for which Jan Palach gave his life as a suicide by fire said Tuesday they were discouraged at the indecisive response from Czechoslovak government leaders.

"We are trying to prevent another burning and they just don't understand," a student spokesman said.

Major demands are for an end to censorship, reimposed after the Soviet-led invasion last August, and banning of a Moscow-oriented propaganda sheet, Zpravy.

Wenceslas Square has become a huge memorial to Palach, a 21-year-old student who died Sunday and became a new Czechoslovak martyr in the cause of freedom.

Hundreds of persons surrounded the fountain where Palach turned himself into a human torch Thursday and the nearby statue of St. Wenceslas. Men took off their hats as they approached the two spots.

Congress expected to take critical look at tax code

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of middle income taxpayers now facing the annual chore of figuring out their deductions may get some relief from Congress.

There are signs, too, that key legislators may decide at least to examine publicly some of the most controversial features of the present tax code: the 27½ per cent depletion allowance and exploration expense provisions applying to the oil industry. No commitments for change are involved.

Still another long-discussed idea is being dusted off: that no one in a substantial income bracket should escape tax entirely because of special provisions in the revenue laws. Congress heard testimony last week about 115 returns showing $100,000 or more annual income, but owing, under present laws, no tax.

These possibilities, along with others, figure on an informal list of subjects of tax hearings, that are expected to begin later this year.

There is as yet nothing official about the list, which was built up mostly of ideas examined at one time or another in the past in connection with individual tax bills. It has no connection with the still-undisclosed list of recommendations prepared by outgoing Treasury Department officials although there is likely to be some overlap.

Since one goal of tax reform would be simplifying the complex return that takes so much of the time of the taxpayer preparing it and the revenue service examining it, extension of the standard deduction will have high priority.

At present, a taxpayer may claim a deduction 10 per cent of his income without bothering to itemize. But there is a ceiling of $1,000 on this standard deduction or $500 for a married person filing a return separate from his spouse's.

One ousted student takes exam

CHEYNEY, Pa. (AP) — Only one of 18 suspended or expelled Cheyney State College students appeared Tuesday for special mid-year examinations.

A spokesman for most students had said earlier they would boycott the exams.

The school told the students they could not take the exams on the Cheyney campus, but arranged for the students to take the tests at a motel in nearby Lima. The students were ousted during disorders at the school for nearly a year.

At the appointed hour, only Junius Stanton, a liberal arts major, appeared for the tests.

The ousted students have appealed to U.S. District Court in Philadelphia for reinstatement. They also have claimed they should be permitted to take the tests with the rest of the student body.

Pittsburgh teachers hint strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh school officials were confronted Tuesday with hints of a teachers' strike, racial tension at a school, and a sit-in by pupils at another.

President Frank Damiani of the Pittsburgh Teachers Education Association told a news conference that the organization's board will meet to see if all legal means have been exhausted in attempts to win improved fringe benefits from the school board.

If they have, he said, the federation will have to consider "withdrawing our services."

The association has been negotiating with the school board for some time to try to win a new severance pay policy, an improved hospitalization plan and other benefits.

Damiani said Monday the association was agreeable to mediation of the dispute by five volunteer clergymen. He said he expected a reply Tuesday from the board.

Board President Maxine Aaron did respond, saying the board would give "earnest consideration" to the panel of clergy as mediators. At the same time, she noted that other means of mediation are open, such as the use of state mediators.

State mediators sat in on the talks last week when the board and another teachers' group, the Pittsburgh Federation of Teachers, settled a dispute, averting a strike that had been set for Thursday.

Meantime, a group of black pupils staged a sit-in at the Gladstone High School cafeteria Tuesday. Officials closed the school, but said it would reopen today.

Some parents and pupils of that school have been demanding the dismissal of the principal and the reinstatement of a pupil suspended for striking the principal.

School officials also scheduled a meeting of the parents of pupils at Perry High School on the North Side for Wednesday night.

The officials said racial tension has been high both at the school and also in the neighborhood.

Thomas and his 27-year-old partner, who was not identified for "personal" reasons, were among the nearly 70 persons, mostly youngsters, picked up in an early morning raid in three central New York counties State Police described it as "one of the largest narcotics raids in New York State to date." They said it involved youthful pushers who sold drugs such as opium, codeine and marijuana to college and high school students.

Of the 36 arrested in Utica, two were 15 years old. At least three juveniles were among the 25 picked up in Syracuse, and a state college biology teacher was arrested in connection with the raid in Morrisville.

"They live in dirty pads, with mattresses on the floor, and all they think about is where they are going to get their next fix," Thomas said in the basement of the Utica City Jail, where the youngsters were packed in until they could be charged.

In Syracuse, Dist. Atty. Frank Cullerti described some of the apartments where many youths were picked up as "nothing but filthy holes."

Firm takes over three magazines

NEW YORK (AP) — The publication of Holiday, Status and Jack & Jill magazines will be taken over by Perfect Film & Chemical Corp.

Perfect is the parent company of Curtis Publishing Co., which publishes Jack & Jill, and Saturday Evening Post Co., which publishes Holiday and Status. Martin S. Ackerman, president of all three companies, said Monday Perfect will publish the three magazines under an arrangement yet to be worked out. One of the unresolved details is whether Perfect will acquire actual ownership of the magazines.

After the death of the Saturday Evening Post was announced earlier this month, the advertising sales staffs of Holiday, Status and Jack & Jill urged that the three magazines be disassociated from the Post image.

Holiday, a travel-oriented monthly with 1.1 million circulation, has suffered a drop in advertising pages for nine consecutive months.

Death toll rises; hundreds stranded

Storms clobber California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some communities were stranded, trains stalled and roads washed out Tuesday as a four-day storm continued to punish California.

The rain in many areas dropped off to a drizzle late Tuesday, raising hopes the worst was over. There were brief periods of sunshine in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

A railroad engineer was crushed to death in a rock slide near the Sierra community of Paxton. He was the fifth victim claimed by the storm in other than traffic accidents.

In Los Angeles alone, 20 traffic deaths were blamed on the storm. More than 6½ inches of rain had fallen in that city since Saturday.

The tiny Humboldt County community of Starvation Flats was abandoned in the floodwaters of the Van Duzen River, its 250 residents taking refuge on higher ground.

The nearby northern town of Ferndale, on the Eel River, was being lapped by flood waters.

Another 200 persons fled their homes on Sherman Island in the Sacramento River in Central California.

Usually placid creeks turned into torrents in the upstate town of Alton, leaving 40 families homeless.

Officials described the flood situation throughout the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta of Central California as potentially dangerous.

Richard Mounkes, an engineer for the Western Pacific Railroad, was crushed by a falling rock as his crew was clearing a slide on the main line 20 miles west of Paxton. Spokesmen said they had "no idea" when the line would be open.

A massive mudslide in the Salinas Valley, 22 miles north of Paso Robles, forced Southern Pacific to cancel all trains on the coast route between San Francisco and Los Angeles.

San Luis Obispo Mayor Clell Whelschell estimated 16 inches of rain caused $1 million damage to the central coastal town.

Salinas Dam was reported near overflow, threatening land in the Salinas River basin.

Mrs. Jago makes pledge; admits to embezzlement

BANGOR — A former officer of a Bangor savings and loan association has pledged to repay in "six months" funds which took her 15 years to embezzle.

Mrs. Mildred Jago made the promise after pleading guilty in Northampton County court Monday to embezzling more than $300,000 from the Bangor Cooperative Savings and Loan Assn.

Judge William G. Barthold

deferred sentencing until he receives a complete presentence investigation. The judge told Mrs. Jago:

"I am giving you the opportunity to make restitution to the best of your ability."

"I want to make it clear that this is not to be construed as a promise that a jail term will not be imposed."

Mrs. Jago, 66, of 318 Market St., Bangor, faces a possible fine of $5,000 and a maximum sentence of five years.

The former secretary of the association, who faces other legal problems, said restitution would be "a problem of six months, I'm sure... at least six months."

Francis Varilla, a state banking official who took over the operation of the association when it went into receivership, said he thinks the embezzlement took place over a period of 15 years.

"The actual amount is being checked by direct confirmation with depositors and mortgagors, but the loss stands right now at $340,000," Varilla said.

"The admission stunned Judge Barthold. 'How was it done,' he asked?"

Varilla, who described Mrs. Jago as the association's "whole operation," replied:

"She would intercept money being paid on loans and then make interest payments on the loans herself and would enter fictitious loans with the checks made payable to her."

Varilla also said that Mrs. Jago would sell what appeared to be 40 shares of association stock for $4,000, but the sale would be entered on the company records at a one-share, $100 transaction.

In further explaining Mrs. Jago's financial maneuverings, Northampton County District Attorney Charles Spaziani said:

"Where the mortgage on a $15,000 home was say, $10,000 and the owner of the house paid it off, Mrs. Jago would convert the $10,000 to her own use, keep the mortgage open and pay the interest on it."

"She would use the money from another mortgage to do that."

Spaziani said that when dividends would become due Mrs. Jago would pay them off "in cash."

"Right out of the till, Judge Barthold exclaimed."

"Yes, sir," Mrs. Jago said. Mrs. Jago, who remained composed throughout the hearing, was asked by Judge Barthold what she did with the money.

"The money was put toward insurance. I operated an insurance business. We were so busy that I didn't have time to collect all the premiums."

"Well, you were pretty busy doing this," Judge Barthold said. "I know," the defendant said.

Spaziani also said that Mrs. Jago used about $100,000 of the embezzled funds to pay off a federal income tax lien.

Atty. James Pritchard, Bangor, solicitor for the association, said Mrs. Jago was bonded for $100,000 and that the association would receive $100,000 from the sale of her insurance business to Henry H. Lehr, Easton.

Mrs. Jago said she has an undetermined amount of accounts receivable from her former insurance clients, but that she was having difficulty in securing records from the Lehr company.

She remains free in $15,000 bail.

Heart Assn. announces changes in penicillin plan

STROUDSBURG — The medical advisor of the Keystone Heart Assn. has announced changes in the association's Penicillin Prophylaxis Program.

Dr. Harold S. Pond Jr. said all patients currently registered under the program should contact their personal physician to be sure their Patient Identification Card is valid.

Dr. Pond announced that record keeping procedures will now be handled by the Heart Assn. in order to free physicians and pharmacists of time consuming details.

ID cards issued prior to Nov. 30, 1968, are not valid and will require a new prescription.

Monroe County residents should take this prescription to the Heart Assn. office at 508 Scott St., Stroudsburg. All residents who suffer from rheumatic fever or other heart condition can receive oral penicillin at a cost of one cent per tablet upon the recommendation of their doctor.

The program has been in operation in Monroe County for the last eight years and currently there are 136 from Monroe, Pike and Wayne counties currently registered in the program.

Under a rotation system established by the association and participating pharmacists, Monroe residents can purchase penicillin at LeBar's Drug Store at 630 Main St., Stroudsburg.

Persons outside the county can contact the Scott St. office for information in their areas.

The association also thanked Parke Unangst, owner of Kresge's Drug Store, East Stroudsburg, for his long participation in the program.

Coutts renamed chairman of Pike County soil district

MILFORD — George Coutts of Paupack who is a Pike County commissioner was re-elected chairman of the county Soil and Water Conservation District during a meeting Monday night in Milford.

Julio H. Santos, a farmer in Milford Township, was named vice chairman. Ronald McMaster, media specialist for the Delaware Valley School District, was elected to the combined office of secretary-treasurer. McMaster was also named the district's representative to the state executive council.

Joseph Micalek of the extension service discussed a public hearing scheduled in Scranton on Jan. 30 by the Governor's committee for the preservation of agricultural land.

It was decided that the Pike County District would prepare a statement to be presented at the hearing.

The statement will detail the land use and land taxation problem that are current in the county.

During the meeting at the request of Davis Chant, Conashaugh Lakes, Inc., the owner of 1,700 acres of land in Dingmans Township, was accepted as a cooperator.

The company is interested in the drainage of wet land and development of home sites in that area. Frank Jarvis Hawley R.D. was approved for the furnishing of the source of resource information relative to land development.

Visitors to the meeting include Jack Nehador, area conservationist; Samuel Browning, conservation field representative; County Agent Joseph Staley, and Forrest Jacob Kintz, Work Unit Conservationist. George Collier, also introduced his new assistant, Lewis Steckler.

D.V. entitled to $14,376 for program

MILFORD — Delaware Valley School District has been informed by the Department of Public Instruction that it's total entitlement under the Elementary, Secondary Education Act is $14,376.

Dale Tyson, superintendent of the Delaware Valley School District, announced Tuesday that the school system would use the funds from Title One of the federal program to conduct a summer program geared essentially toward students enrolled in the Target program.

Tyson explained that Delaware Valley received the entitlement on the basis of 97 students enrolled in the district, ranging in ages from five to 17.

Eighty-four children qualified under the stipulation of families having an annual income of $2,000, or less.

Eight pupils were judged to be covered by the Aid to Families with Dependent Children ruling and five children reside in foster homes.

Richard M. Nixon our 37th president

Richard M. Nixon is now the 37th president of the United States.

It was obviously the "new" Nixon who took the oath and delivered the inaugural address before thousands in Washington and millions of television viewers Monday.

The inauguration of the 37th president was impressive because of its simplicity and apparent sincerity. It was truly an inspiring ceremony.

There was a noticeable absence of much of the frills of past inaugurations. There was less talk and at least on the surface more meaning.

Our incoming president was soft spoken, even as he asked all those not in agreement to speak softly and to try and understand. He asked for everyone to keep in touch and in so doing assist in solving the many problems that have befallen us in recent years.

It was certainly a wiser and more mature Nixon who revealed that the United States is ready to reason, negotiate and compromise in an effort to solve its internal problems and those of the world.

The new leader of the free world spoke softly, but with emphasis, as he said, "We cannot expect to make everyone our friend, but we can try to make no one our enemy."

Somehow it was most reassuring to hear the incoming president pledge "my energies and all the wisdom I can summon, to the cause of peace among nations."

His call for black and white to live together as one nation brought new hope to those who have long struggled for equality.

Nixon's planning of a course was in direct contrast to the retiring Lyndon B. Johnson, who had the presidency thrust upon him five years ago by the tragic assassination of John F. Kennedy.

If a good start plays a major part in a race, Richard M. Nixon certainly must be respected in the four-year marathon that began Monday.

Time to check

Now that January is fast moving to the brink of history, it is time that each of us takes stock of our obligation to assist the 1969 March of Dimes.

This year's drive in Monroe County has a goal of 10,000 and it will take a little bit of giving by everyone if it is to be successful.

Have you fulfilled your obligation?

The area mothers took part in their annual march Monday night in an effort to obtain a large share of the $10,000. Several organizations have held March of Dimes dances to further assist in an effort to put the campaign over the top.

Now, as time begins to run out on January, which is set aside each year for the March of Dimes, it is up to each of us to determine whether or not we have done our share to make the 1969 campaign successful.

The March of Dimes still uses a portion of its funds to take care of those suffering from polio. However, the bulk of the money now obtained is channeled to the fight against the dread birth defects that have caused a high degree of suffering around the world.

The local aspect of the campaign takes on a new meaning this year as $2,500 of the income will be used to grant college scholarships to graduates of area high schools.

This year's campaign has had good organization and there appears to have been more than the usual amount of interest generated. However, the success of the drive will depend greatly on the manner in which the loose ends are tied during the fading days of this month.

Did you do your share?

'Secret liberal'

WASHINGTON — The most significant political fact to the hour is now so evident it can't be seriously disputed.

President Richard M. Nixon is a "secret liberal."

He may not welcome the description. He resists labels and sees himself as a pragmatist, a problem-solver — neither liberal nor conservative — who wants to do what needs to be done.

But Nixon is already proving himself a liberal-in-action if not a liberal-in-theory — and this is what counts.

The evidence: Lyndon Johnson initiated and Congress approved the largest volume of social legislation of any president in history. And Nixon prepares to carry forward every major Johnson measure.

During the eight Eisenhower years 45 new welfare programs were passed. During the five Johnson years some 435 welfare programs were passed and Nixon is not proposing to dismantle them. He is proposing to build on them and his goal is to make sure they achieve their purposes more effectively.

He told his recruiting staff: Find me the best man to make these programs work.

President Nixon has stated his intention to do more for Negroes and other underprivileged Americans than any previous president.

He has ordered wide-ranging proposals from 22 task forces and if he adopts a good part of them the result will be, as one Nixon-watcher put it, "a more efficient Great Society."

Finally, Nixon has committed his administration to a big open-ended increase in Social Security benefits by advocating that they be boosted regularly to match higher living costs.

Richard Nixon is no Lyndon Johnson by another name. There are significant differences. He will want to refine much of the Great Society legislation. He will want to reduce the role of the federal government in running some programs by revenue-sharing and block grants to the states. He wants to put more problem-solving power where the problems are — in the states and cities.

But the fact remains that Nixon is not going to disrupt, decrease or dismantle the vast, help-people, help-the-states programs he inherited from the Great Society any more than Dwight Eisenhower did those he inherited from the New Deal.

He accepted the reform of the New Deal as part of the fabric of modern society and cites as his proudest presidential achievement the extension of Social Security to cover more than 12 million more people.

The president views himself as a "modern Republican" in the Eisenhower tradition and he intends to use conservative principles to deal with the nation's problems, not to employ conservative words as an excuse for neglecting them.

Difficult to stop

Nixon is aware that it would not be easy for him to end many of the Great Society programs even if he wanted to. They are not just Johnson programs. They have been enacted by Congress and embody congressional commitments, as LBJ rightly noted in his farewell address. Many of them were passed since the big Republican gains in the 1966 congressional election.

And the voters told Nixon that they want the substance of the Great Society retained. Almost as many voted for Hubert Humphrey as for Richard Nixon and the president knows his present — and future — strength is at the political center. It is clear that the sharp ideological differences are being steadily muted between the two parties.

Many Democrats are coming to see that some programs can be better handled by state and local governments. Many Republicans are coming to see that many things will have to continue to be done by Washington and that even when initiative and responsibility can be delegated, federal financing will be needed.

If all this makes President Nixon a liberal, he'll have to live with it. It's a fact.

Two jobs possible

WASHINGTON—President Nixon has said that he wants to change the nature of the vice presidency, upgrade the job and all that. If there was one other president who did not say something like that on assuming office, his name escapes me.

Nixon's idea, no doubt, is all very sincere, but, after all, what can he really do to upgrade what is basically a very demeaning job? Can he send the vice president on inspection trips abroad? That's been tried, but, unfortunately for the president, the vice president always returns and then something else must be found for him.

Can he have the vice president take over certain ceremonial functions? That's been tried, too, but former presidents have found there is nothing which infuriates political groups more than to send the vice president when it's the chief executive who was wanted to cut the ribbon. And letting a vice president greet visiting heads of state is a grand way to insult one's allies.

Which returns us to the original question: Just what is the best thing to do with a vice president? A friend of mine has suggested that a vice president should be mothballed — as we do with battleships — and placed in the Smithsonian until such time as he might be needed. But I didn't lead you this far down the page to make a dumb suggestion like that.

You see, I know what to do with vice presidents! We simply let them continue doing whatever it was they were doing before they were elected vice president. (Oh, Donald, my boy, you're a genius. For that idea you get two days out in the sun.) All right, let's kick it around:

First, forget that nonsense about the vice president having a job—being president of the Senate. All that consists of is maintaining order in the chamber and it's generally delegated, on the absence of the veeep, to the lowest ranking member of the Senate. The senior Senators avoid this mindless task.

But just because he's vice president, or president-in-waiting, if you will, why should a man not continue on as, say, governor of Maryland, minority whip, majority leader, senator from California, or what-have-you? Would not Hubert H. Humphrey have been more valuable to President Johnson as minority whip, which he once was, than wasting away on "make-work" projects?

And wouldn't John F. Kennedy have had more success with Congress if his vice president had also been majority leader? There's no reason why a man can't be vice president, yet continue to be useful to his country. Let's see to it.

We have a man named Shakespeare heading the United States Information Agency. Ah, yes, the bard of Potomac.

If Hubert Humphrey doesn't like teaching, he can always go into sports—maybe as coach of the Baltimore Colts.

Well, Nixon's been President for almost two full days now and things still seem the same.

Think you got troubles? Imagine the Cherry Blossom Festival officials here; right now they have to guess when the blossoms will be out!

Wouldn't it be great if we could schedule inaugurations, conventions, Olympics, etc., for one place and the demonstrations for somewhere else?

Personnel problems

John A. Goldsmith

WASHINGTON — President Richard M. Nixon is launching his new administration with a couple of troublesome personnel problems which could take a little time to resolve.

One problem is the selection of qualified individuals to serve in sub-cabinet jobs. The other involves the replacement of Democratic incumbents in politically appointive jobs down the administration chain.

Six weeks ago, when Nixon aides were soliciting job recommendations from many nonpartisan sources, including individuals listed in Who's Who, it was said that Nixon would draw his top administrators quickly from a large pool of well qualified manpower. Those statements appear to have been over-optimistic.

The problem is clear at the level of assistant secretaries in government departments and their top deputies. The Nixon "team" is now taking the field with a flock of vacancies in these high echelons.

Nixon aides are now explaining that Cabinet members in the new administration are moving slowly and deliberately to assure selection of top officials who can work harmoniously with their associates. There is a little more to it than that, however.

Like all of his immediate predecessors, Nixon is having some trouble finding the right man for each of the important jobs which he must fill. That large pool of qualified manpower is not quite what it appeared to be in the election's joyous aftermath.

Top Republicans now admit privately that some of the lawyers, bankers and businessmen who were enthusiastically "available" in late November had second thoughts when the job offered was not in the cabinet but a somewhat anonymous post a step or two down in the government hierarchy.

Federal patronage

In the final analysis, the more troublesome problem for Nixon could be the filling of non-civil service jobs a couple of echelons down from the sub-cabinet. Involved is the question of top-level federal patronage.

Some Republican politicians and would-be job holders, with their party taking control of government for only the second time in 36 years, want Nixon and his aides to move aggressively in taking over positions which are not protected by civil service. Many of them think President Eisenhower was not aggressive enough when he took over in 1953.

"The Kennedy people did it right," recalls an Eisenhower Administration job holder. "When I got to work on the day after inauguration,

Raymond P. Shafer

The Pennsylvania Story

Remember tax plan?

HARRISBURG — Whatever happened to Gov. Raymond P. Shafer's vaunted "tax-sharing" program?

In case it's difficult to recall back to 1967, Shafer was then pushing a plan that would require the federal government to turn back part of its tax revenue to the states in the form of "block grants." Unlike the present system, under which the use for funds is always specified, "block grants" would be unallocated money given to the states to be used in any type of program the state wished.

At that time, the Keystone State was in dire financial straits, a Democrat was president and the federal budget was running a deficit.

Once again the state is in dire financial straits but this time a Republican has been elected president and the federal budget is expected to show a surplus for the current and the next fiscal years.

At the same time, the governor is hinting that the people of Pennsylvania have an income tax in their future.

Stars right

So the stars should be right for another try at attempting to get the federal government to loosen the purse strings and get good old Penn's Woods out of the woods by making block grants.

But — what looked so good in 1967 doesn't seem to look that good in 1969. The governor has mentioned in passing the possibility of federal help but his suggestion was buried in a ton of rhetoric about other things.

But if it's any comfort, Pennsylvania is not alone in being in a financial dilemma.

New York is in the same fix. But that epitome of Republican liberalism, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, bluntly told President-elect Richard Nixon last week that the states were at the end of their tax resources and only huge doses of federal funds would save them.

At the same time, Rockefeller called for a five per cent cutback in state aid for schools, welfare, civil service pay raises and most other programs.

Lester Coleman, M.D.

Advances in medicine

Some of the most remarkable advances in modern medicine have been made possible by scientists in fields far removed from medicine itself. Surgery of the heart, transplantation of hearts and kidneys could only have been accomplished because engineers, chemists and tool manufacturers have contributed their knowledge to the doctors and surgeons. Without the heart-lung machine, heart surgery would be impossible. Without the kidney machine the dread disease of uremia would still take the lives of thousands. Medicine is an inter-science study that depends on complete cooperation of specialists in all medical, engineering sciences.

One of the aims of all modern medicine and surgery is to return the sick person to

I was told I had my choice of resigning or being fired. I resigned, of course."

Veteran GOP leaders in Congress are among those urging a sweep-out policy by Nixon and his top aides. They think the GOP should act to counter the long years of Democratic control during which even the civil service rolls became, in their view, full of Democrats.

Nixon's recruiting experts are reported concentrating on less than a thousand top jobs — administrators, consultants, personal aides and the like — which are identified as subject to political appointment. Actually, however, there are about 4,000 such jobs on a listing compiled for Congress in what used to be called the "Green Book." (It now has a buff cover.)

Some GOP professionals would like to see the Nixon Administration assign some political appointee in each department to see that those political jobs, when available, are filled by Republicans recommended by the National Committee or GOP offices on Capitol Hill. That, a few old-timers recall, is how it was handled under the old master, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Bit of mess

These GOP activists have been assured, generally, by Nixon aides that the new president will move to open up the sort of jobs, at upwards of $20,000 a year, which are the cement in political construction work. However, Bryce Harlow, the new president's top congressional liaison man, admitted last week that the personnel situation is something of a mess at present.

Harlow met privately with a group of Nixon's old friends in Congress who call themselves the "Crowder and Marching Society." In their discussion, it became clear that such actions as the Who's Who solicitation have produced a blizzard of paper which had delayed the replacement of Democrats with faithful Republicans.

Some House Republicans came away from the session with Harlow convinced that it will be March or April before Nixon's aides can get the problem in hand and set up a going personnel operation.

Such a delay is worrisome for some of the Republicans. They are frankly afraid that displacement of some Democratic appointees, if it is not done soon, will be difficult to do at all.

Some Republicans in the Senate and the House would like to take a hand in listing the replacements which should be made in the government departments and independent agencies. So far, at least, they have not been asked to do that.

There seems little indication any such cuts will be in the offing in Pennsylvania's upcoming budget.

However — the Democratic House leadership, under Speaker Herber Fineman and Majority Leader K. Leroy Irvis, is making preparations to "try" to cut the budget in several areas. Their attempts to do the same in the past two years, when they were in the minority, met with some success. In 1967, they were able to force the governor to make some reductions. Last year, they were not so fortunate, and the budget went through virtually as submitted by Shafer.

Indications shown

While Democrats can't say right now how they expect to cut the budget — after all, it hasn't been submitted — they have indicated some things they're toying with.

In a letter requesting budgetary information from the governor, they asked for a complete run down of mandated costs. ("Mandated" is one of those words often used but only dimly understood. It means literally, "required by law.") Fineman wants the governor to list the specific laws that mandate the increases!

Thus far, he hasn't received a word from the front office. (You'd think that all the governor would have to do would be to give him a copy of "information on hand.")

House Democrats have also asked for a breakdown on employees between those on civil service and those on the patronage system. Democrats may well require a reduction in state employees before going along with the chief executive's idea on increasing salaries. After all, the state payroll has swollen to more than 104,000 — and there should be some room to cut, particularly those hired on a patronage basis.

Still, no one doubts that additional money will be needed for the next fiscal year. And since Shafer thought it such a good idea to divvy federal taxes last year, maybe some of that deficit could be made up via a Nixon-Shafer meeting in Washington!

Ann Landers

Spurn sex salesman

Dear Ann Landers: I was brought up by old-fashioned parents and I guess you'd be justified in calling me square. I'm a college sophomore and the only girl on the floor of this dorm who is a virgin. I grew up believing I should save myself for the man I marry, but these past few weeks have caused me to reconsider.

The big question, now that I have fallen in love, is this: Is it unrealistic to expect a young man to suffer the anxieties of frustration because his fiancée happens to believe as I do? Furthermore, will my rigidity cost me a wonderful husband?

Jack says the divorce rate scares him to death. He says he loves me but he's afraid we might not be sexually compatible. He feels we should find out before we marry. He has also suggested that I might be frigid. Last night he added another barb when he said, "A girl who teases is sadistic and immature."

You seem to have an answer for everything. Please tell me how to say no to a sex salesman with whom I happen to be in love.

NEED YOU

Dear Need: Here's your answer: "My body belongs to me and I don't owe you experimental privileges or an undress rehearsal."

What happens to your body, is your responsibility and it is also your problem if something unplanned should occur. Jack's theory that it is smart to try things out to see if they work before you "buy" is rubbish. A salesman once sold me a vacuum cleaner that worked beautifully during the 30-day trial. For some mysterious reason it fell apart two days after I bought it.

Erma Bombeck

Worst-dressed housewives

On a clothing budget of $45 a year (this includes my Red Cross shoes) I didn't expect to make the Best Dressed list. But when you can't even make the Worst Dressed list, this hurts.

In scouting dress designer Mr. Blackwell's list of the country's worst dressed, I noted that this year he enshrined in his Worst Dressed Hall of Fame Elizabeth Taylor, who has made his list for the third consecutive year. If that's supposed to make me feel better, forget it. I don't care if she wears tennis shoes to bed. She's still got Richard Burton and that's a lot of Brownie points.

Mr. Blackwell sees Kaye Ballard as "Prince Valiant in a panty girdle." Mama Cass "in gowns by Oscar Meyer" and Doris Day who "has stayed too long at the fair."

The fact that not one normal, average American housewife was considered for the list strikes me as unbelievable. Therefore, I am compiling my own list of the 10-worst-dressed housewives.

Juanita Tacky: Her grocery ensembles are memorable, usually consisting of a pair of stretch pants and a baby sweater worn under a coat. Juanita could get arrested if she ever took her coat off.

Melba Farmheiser: An AAA nightmare. She drives her children to school in a nightgown, a fleece bathrobe, her husband's Eisenhower jacket, a head scarf, a pair of bedroom slippers and Girl Scout socks.

Carla Crag: Altie Treasures. For her perseverance in trying to bring back the fascinator, open-toed shoes and shoulder pads.

'Winnie Winner: Better known as a 43-year-old (and holding) Nancy Sinatra. Despite the 20 extra pounds Winnie has added since she was married (10 over each knee), she still persists in mini skirts and stretch boots.

Annie Frug: A wardrobe dispose-all. Annie dresses the way she eats. At the end of dinner she scoops all the leftovers on her plate so they won't go to waste. Her wardrobe is collected the same way. On a cold day she can be seen in public in Donald Duck mittens. Roy Rogers boots, Mousketeer beanie, and a tote bag with Mary Poppins in three glorious colors.

Rita Gatsby: Flab revisited. The older Rita gets, the more daring the bathing suit. It's a real treat to sit around and watch Rita try to get a tan on her stretch marks.

Erma Bombeck: For dressing as basic as white sauce. Her dress for all seasons is known: having worn it to weddings (including her own), pregnancies, funerals, bar mitzvahs, shopping playground duty, cleaning the oven, graduations, prom and two Halloween parties.

If you're not on the list, ladies, better luck next year.

Art Dept. head wins doctorate

EAST STROUDSBURG — Irene Mitchell, head of the Art Department at East Stroudsburg State College, was awarded a Doctorate in Art Education during commencement exercises held recently at Penn State University.

A native of the Wilkes-Barre area, Dr. Mitchell earned the bachelor of science degree from Kutztown State and a master's of science degree in art from Penn State University where she continued her studies through the doctorate.

She joined the art department staff of ESSC in 1961 and succeeded to the chairmanship of that department following the recent retirement of Dr. Madelon Powers.

Dr. Mitchell's art works have been shown in regional exhibitions. She is an active participant of the National Art Education Association and the Eastern Arts Association, and also holds memberships in Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Lambda Theta, the American Association of University Women, The American Association of University Professors, The Institute for the Study of Art in Education, The International Society for Education through Art, The Pennsylvania Art Education Association, The Wyoming Valley Art League, and the Penn State Graduate Club in Art Education.

ESSC students to again take tour of Europe on credit-earning trip

EAST STROUDSBURG — Would you like to spend your Fourth of July at the Delphi in ancient Greece? If you have the spirit of travel and adventure, East Stroudsburg State College's Contemporary Europe 1969 meets the requirements.

ESSC's Social Science Department is sponsoring a five-week summer project tour of Eastern and Western Europe which will enable the student to study firsthand the contrast between the sociological, economic and political systems on both sides of the Iron Curtain. The students travel program will take them to Portugal, Italy, Greece, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Soviet Union, Sweden, England and Ireland. Three weeks of the tour are within the NATO and neutral nations of Europe and two weeks are in Communist bloc countries.

Co-directors of the tour are Dr. James H. Leidling, Professor of Sociology, and Mr. William D. McFadden, Associate Professor of History. Professor McFadden is an experienced European traveler, having been the director of the three previous Contemporary Europe trips from ESSC.

Six credit hours in the graduate or undergraduate level of the Social Sciences can be earned in conjunction with the tour. The students will be required to read several books and attend a campus orientation at ESSC before departure.

Throughout the journey, seminars will be given covering a wide range of topics. Some of the lectures include "The Rise of the Hungarian Labor Movement; Attitude of U.S.S.R. Toward Eastern Block Countries;" and "The Move Toward the Reunification of Ireland."

In addition, a daily diary will be kept while enroute. The social program of the trip includes plays and musical performances to provide a view of the cultural life of Europe. Housing will be in both university residences and standard tourist hotels. Accommodations are selected to provide a native atmosphere and an opportunity to meet and mix with Europeans.

The Contemporary European Program of ESSC has been highly successful and enriching for those who have taken it in the first three years. This year's travels promise to continue in the same fine tradition of the previous summer's adventures.

Chabal head of lodge for police

STROUDSBURG — Michael Chabal has been elected president of the local Fraternal Order of Police at the annual venison dinner in Stroudsburg Municipal Building.

Other officers elected were David Shay, vice president; Russell Decker, secretary; John Baujan, treasurer; Richard Wolbert, chaplain; William Everett, inner guard; Harry Campbell, outer guard, and Charles Allen, conductor.

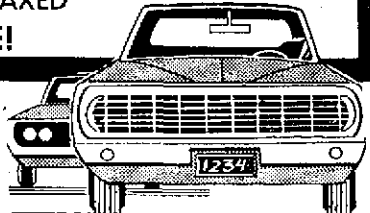

In other business, which followed the dinner, a short discussion was held on the possibility of holding a Policeman's Ball.

A committee will be named to act on the possibility and will meet Sunday, Jan. 26, at 2 p.m.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♣	Pass
3♦	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	4♦	Pass

Opening lead—two of hearts.

Let's say you're declarer at six clubs and West leads a heart. East wins with the ace and returns the queen which you take with the king. How do you proceed?

It is obvious that the only other possible loser is a diamond. It is also clear that you can escape this loser by finessing successfully against the queen. Your big problem is which way to finesse, since you have the slam in the bag if you guess right.

There are two schools of thought in situations of this kind. One is that East, who entered the bidding is more likely to have the queen; the other is that West probably has the greater diamond length and is consequently more likely to have the queen.

Both are rules of thumb only, and not much reliance should be placed on either of them without exhausting other means of locating the queen. In line with this, you play a spade to the ace and ruff a spade high. You then enter dummy with a trump (West showing out) and ruff another spade high. Next you lead another trump to dummy and ruff dummy's last spade.

By this time you have assembled all the information you need for a successful diamond finesse. The East-West cards are an open book and you can bet your life and your family homestead that you will find the right way to finesse. The four rounds of spades you played clarified the entire picture.

East has shown up with four spades, three clubs, and should have at least five hearts for his overall in the two-level. He therefore cannot have more than one diamond.

Accordingly, after drawing a third round of trumps, you cash the ace of diamonds and take a diamond finesse for the queen with absolute assurance that it will win.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

One of the main things that separate people, that keep them isolated from other people as effectively as if they'd been each preserved in plastic, is the simple fact that they don't know what to say to each other.

What they need is a common denominator. Of course extremes of weather will do it. Strangers will exchange "Well enough for you?" or "Some snow!" but that doesn't get you much forward in getting to know people.

A disaster like our flood that involves everybody, strips everybody down to essentials more effectively than anything else, but heaven forbid we should have something like that too often.

One of the most effective de-barriers today is televised coverage of an event of national interest. The men have it through their championship football games and World Series, but the women are sort of left out.

But take something like the inauguration, and people, who ordinarily sit side-by-side at lunch counters with nothing to break their silence except the clink of silver against plate, has something to say to everybody else.

The opinions range from the content of the inauguration address, to the number of prayers, to the clothes worn by the women, to the action of the hippies, and the prospects for the administration.

It's a friendly sort of feeling to have the anonymous shape at the next stool turn into a real person with opinions, prejudices, and individual reactions. It's a de-alcoholized version of the sense of community that happens on bar stools, and it's too bad we can't have it more often.

Not Inaugurations. Four years is enough for all the pre-election furor, but common denominators.

Garden Club officers installed for new year

STROUDSBURG — Installation of officers marked the annual business meeting of the Monroe County Garden Club held at the YMCA.

Elected and installed by Mrs. E. R. Travis, a past president, were Mrs. B. F. Newschwager, first vice president; Mrs. Thomas H. Wiss III, second vice president; Mrs. Russell Custard, recording secretary; Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George T. Walker, financial secretary; and Mrs. Vernon L. Wallace, treasurer.

Mrs. Jacob Z. Hartman, president, presided at the meeting highlighted by the announcement of the 1968 sweepstakes winners in the monthly exhibits: Mrs. Elwood Grant, first, and Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, 2.

Yearly reports were given by chairmen of standing committees whose work has brought many honors to the club.

The dates of coming events announced were: Philadelphia Flower Show, March 11; Wyckoff Fashion Show, April 22 in East Stroudsburg High School; program at Eastern YWCA on Jan. 22 at 12:30 on "Hearts and Flowers" and antique Valentines and a program on Feb. 26 at 2:30 with a Bonsai demonstration by Mrs. Mark Swartz.

Arrangements at the meeting included one "Those Golden Years" in memory of Breezy Point Park, arranged by Mrs. Ernest W. Schwartz using dried and fresh material sprayed with gold enamel.

The tea table arrangement by Mrs. Bernard Peters was "Winter Wonderland", using moss and insulation for base, teasel, fern, prongs, driftwood and miniature woodland animals.

Mrs. Elwood Grant had on display dried Espina flowers from Mexico whose branches contain fibrous roots.

Mrs. Edgar Van Why was chairman of the hospitality committee which included Mrs. J. Harold Lanterman, Mrs. Russell Custard, Mrs. Elwood Grant, Mrs. Vernon Wallace, Mrs. Bernard Peters, The Misses Margaret and Rose Nilis poured tea.

Arrangements for February will be in red, white and blue or single colors; and horticulture will be forced Spring shrubs.

Learning French by living it, with some help from tradesmen

Fourth in a series of articles by Angelyn Sills Baldwin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Sills, ESSC, who is with her husband, George, in France, preparing for work in Africa with Church World Service. This is on "The Student Life"

LO CHAMBON, FRANCE — Here at L'Accueil Fraternel (Brotherly Welcome) foreigners from Norway, Germany, Holland and the U.S.A. are gathered to learn French before going to work in Africa. We have three to five hours of classes a day which includes not only formal classes, language labs and conversation classes but also classes in tropical hygiene, technical terms (agriculture, mechanics, etc.) and student seminars.

We also occasionally have guest speakers who have returned from Africa. (I mustn't omit homework. When I finished the university I figure I'd never take another course, but here I am—never too old to learn.)

We have the advantage of living in a small village (3,000 people at an altitude of 3,000 feet) where the shopkeepers and townspeople speak only French. So we are obligated to practice what we learn.

Unfortunately there are 15 Americans here and it's very tempting to speak English rather than French. We are also somewhat isolated from the rest of the community, much as college students are in the States. We all live, study and eat at the school.

At meals our French teachers are seated at the table among us. The rule is that everyone must speak French at meals, but this rule is observed only in proportion to the diligence and determination of the speaker.

After four months of French, we find that we have made the switch from "Frenghish" to French—not necessarily good grammatical French but French, nonetheless. Now I can understand most of what I hear (except radio and TV) and read. I've learned to laugh at my mistakes.

Several weeks ago I was talking with one of my teachers. I said, "Je n'ai pas mangé de poisson pendant longtemps." What I said was "I haven't eaten any poison for a long time" when what I wanted to say was "Poisson" which means "fish."

When she looked surprised, I was confused until she explained that I probably wanted to eat fish not poison. There is only one letter difference but it makes a big difference in pronunciation. Our teachers are most understanding as are the townspeople when we make mistakes like that.

One hears rumors about the anti-American sentiments of DeGaulle and the French people. I am inclined to think that this is an exclusive attribute of DeGaulle. For in Paris as well as in the country, we have found Frenchmen willing to answer questions and to explain that which we don't understand.

Some time ago I wanted to buy yarn for knitting but I didn't know any of the vocabulary: wool, skein, needles, pattern book. I ventured into a store with yarn on display. Using pidgin French

Kunkletown girl to wed this summer

KUNKLETOWN — Mrs. Hilda Wilmoth of Kunkletown announces the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth Ann, to Tekin Balkir of Yonkers, N.Y.

Miss Wilmoth is a graduate of Pleasant Valley High School, class of 1965 and attended Marywood College and New York University. She is a receptionist with the IBM Corp. in New York City.

Her fiancé received his schooling in Istanbul, Turkey, and Munich, Germany. He is in the engineering division of General Motors Corp. in Tarrytown, N.Y.

A summer wedding is planned.

First graders tackling down-to-earth tracking

STROUDSBURG — First graders in Miss Margaret Bryson's class at the Ramsey School may be able to give pointers on tracking to Indians and detectives. Their quarry will be animal tracks.

Mrs. Elwood Grant, local conservationist and naturalist, had been invited to talk to them last Friday.

Mrs. Grant told the children where they could find animal tracks and urged them to form an exploration party with a parent or friend. After discovering tracks, she told them how to proceed to play detective to determine their identity.

Each track tells a story, she said, telling where the animal sleeps, where he eats and where he travels in search of food or shelter. Since each animal leaves a distinctive print, she gave them definite clues to aid in the identification of various animal and bird tracks.

Council plans World Day of Prayer service

PORTLAND — Plans for the World Day of Prayer observance to be held Friday, Feb. 7, in the Richmond United Methodist Church, at 7:45 were discussed at the meeting of the executive committee of the United Council of Church Women in the Richmond church.

The speaker will be Rev. Milton Hartenstein, pastor of the United Methodist Church of Portland. There will be special music by the host choir.

and much pointing, I finally had what I needed. The clerk read my pattern directions and gave me what I needed. The clerk read my pattern directions and gave me what they called for. It took a long time, but she patiently helped me and I appreciated it. (I also learned several words that day.)

An experience an American couple had will further explain. As Le Chambon is a small village, my friends went to the city of St. Etienne to shop. Realizing that they would not have enough cash on hand to make all their purchases, they were hoping to cash a check on their bank in Le Chambon, to which as a branch bank, a teller is sent each Thursday morning and all day every Saturday.

Miss Kathryn Benjamin bride of Albert Strunk

NAZARETH — Miss Kathryn Benjamin, daughter of Mrs. Rolf E. Johnson of 334 Schoenck Ave., Nazareth, and the late Dr. Raymond G. Benjamin, was married to Albert Strunk in a double ring ceremony on Saturday, Jan. 11 at St. John United Church of Christ Nazareth.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Strunk, 409 Shook Ave., Stroudsburg.

Rev. Clarence R. Funk officiated at the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her stepfather, Dr. Rolf E. Johnson. She was attended by Miss Marie Lesnfsky as maid of honor and Miss Will Ann Bosser as bridesmaid.

Charles Coslar served as best man. Fred Jay Benjamin, brother of the bride, and Sterling Cramer, cousin of the bridegroom were ushers.

A reception for 150 guests was held at the firehouse, Forks Twp.

The bride was graduated from Nazareth High School and will resume her studies at East Stroudsburg State College where she is a sophomore.

Her husband was graduated from Stroudsburg High School and is employed by Howard Post Plumber.

Obituaries

Nellie Fitz, Sterling, dies at 86

SOUTH STERLING — Mrs. Nellie Mae Fitz, 86, of Sterling, died Tuesday night after a long illness. She had been living in the home of her son, George, in Angels.

Born in Zion, Sterling Township, Mrs. Fitz was a daughter of the late George and Ella Simons Phillips.

She had been a lifelong resident of the Sterling area and made her home with her son since October.

She is survived by her son, three daughters, Mrs. Ellen McLain, Springbrook; Mrs. Thelma Peet, Newfoundland; and Mrs. Genevieve Voeste, Lewisburg; 11 grandchildren, 21 great-grandchildren, and one great-great-granddaughter.

Also, three brothers, Homer, of Byram, Conn.; Mark, of Madisonville, and Horace, of Sterling, and one sister, Mrs. Emily Chapman, Lake Ariel.

Services will be held Saturday at 1 p.m. in Arthur J. Frey Funeral Home, South Sterling, with the Rev. William Henwood, pastor of Jericho Independent Church, officiating.

Burial will be in Catterton Cemetery, Sterling. Friends may call Friday from 2 to 4 p.m. and after 7 p.m. at the funeral home.

Frank Perry's services held

EAST STROUDSBURG — Funeral services for Frank Perry, 61, of 850 Thomas St., Stroudsburg, were held Tuesday in the Lanterman Funeral Home with the Rev. George Doll officiating.

Burial was in Laurel Hill Cemetery, Minisink Hills.

Palbearers were William Tucker, David Harman, James Smith, Walter Bensley, Alton Kunkle, and Norman Williams.

Youth posts $2,000 bail in dope case

STROUDSBURG — Salvatore Pusateri, 19, of 517 N. Fifth St., Stroudsburg, Tuesday was released from Monroe County Jail after $2,000 bail was posted for him.

Pusateri was arrested Thursday, Jan. 9, by State Police from Stroudsburg and charged with possession and control of dangerous narcotic drugs.

He was arrested in his home and police found a small cache of narcotics in his car, which was parked in front of his home.

Pusateri was taken, after being arrested, before Stroudsburg Justice of the Peace Floyd W. Kellogg.

J.P. fines shoplifter on charges

STROUDSBURG — Mrs. Carol A. Kunkle, Sciota, recently was arrested and charged with three counts of shoplifting in Stroudsburg.

The charges were made by authorities in Woolworth's, Teddy Bear Mart, and J.C. Penney's.

Mrs. Kunkle was taken before Stroud Township Justice of the Peace Raymond Silver where she pleaded guilty.

Silver set the fine at $25 on each of three charges, costs at $33, and the woman had to make restitution of $11 for the articles taken from the stores.

Mrs. Kunkle was unable to pay the total of $119.90 and was committed to Monroe County Jail. She was released the same night after payment was made.

Man jailed in default

STROUDSBURG — State Police from Stroudsburg arrested a Scranton man on a drunk driving charge.

Ted A. Pietrzykowski, 57, is in Monroe County Jail in default of $500 bail. He was taken before Mount Pocono Justice of the Peace Mrs. Emma Merwin and after being unable to post bail was committed to jail.

E.S. club to help youth with proceeds from concert

EAST STROUDSBURG — Proceeds from the Exchange Club Pop Concert to be held at East Stroudsburg High School on Thursday, Jan. 30, will be used by the organization to continue its youth work.

Glenn Derringer, currently director of instrumental music at Cheltenham High School, will be guest star at the concert.

Derringer, an organist, is a graduate of Temple University, and has appeared on such outstanding television shows as those of Jackie Gleason, Perry Como and Bob Hope and also appearances on the concert stage.

The Exchange Club will use proceeds from next week's concert to aid the cause of Little League baseball, Babe Ruth League baseball, the playground in East Stroudsburg, Youth of the Month, annual scholarship award and the annual dinner honoring the valedictorian and salutatorian of all Monroe County high schools.

West Hazleton defendant guilty of passing checks

STROUDSBURG — George Sterba, West Hazleton, presently confined in the Monroe County Jail, was found guilty by a jury Tuesday on a charge of forging worthless checks.

The trial was in its second day when the jury delivered the verdict after less than two hours deliberation.

Sterba's trial began Monday with the testimony of six witnesses for the prosecution. There were no witnesses for the defense. Sterba did not take the stand to testify in his own behalf.

Tuesday's session was devoted to the attorneys' summations and the charge to the jury by Monroe County Judge Arlington W. Williams.

Judge Williams deferred sentencing pending a presentence investigation. Bail remained at $5,000, but Sterba was remanded to the custody of the jail because he could not post bail.

Following Sterba's trial, the trial of James H. Kishpaugh Jr., 129 N. 2nd St., Stroudsburg, got underway. Kishpaugh is charged with obstructing a police officer in the performance of his duty.

Before the attorneys, Assistant District Attorney Phillip P. Santucci for the Commonwealth and James F. Marsh for the defense, made their summations to the jury. Marsh requested permission of the court for Kishpaugh to change his plea to guilty.

Permission was granted and the trial was over.

Kishpaugh's arrest and subsequent charge was in connection with an incident which occurred on Aug. 23, 1968. Stroudsburg Police Officer

David Shay was in the process of making an arrest while Shay was on foot patrol on Main St.

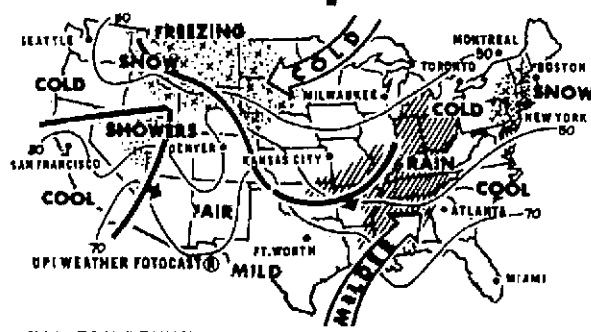

Shay had asked Kishpaugh to call the police headquarters for assistance in the form of a vehicle. According to Kishpaugh's own testimony, Kishpaugh refused to do so.

In the final action taken by the court on Tuesday, a jury was drawn to serve on the trial of Helen Petherman, 2011 N. 5th St., Stroudsburg, who is charged with involuntary manslaughter. That trial is expected to begin today.

Serving on the Sterba jury were Dora Kiofach, Alvorna Melick and Gerald E. Shanley Sr., all of Stroudsburg; John Dougherty, Walter E. Mader and Nathan G. Meyer, all of East Stroudsburg; Edna F. Ponder, Stroud Twp.; Stanley S. Smith, Smithfield Twp.; Audrey Transue, Barrett Twp.; William J. Bossett, Pocono Twp.; Albert S. Breymeier, Paradise Twp.; and George Court, Delaware Water Gap.

Serving on the Petherman jury are Clifford Lambert and Catherine F. Abel, both of East Stroudsburg; Estella C. VanVleet, Price Twp.; Jacob Smith, Tobyhanna Twp.; Sterling Schoonover, Middle Smithfield Twp.; John W. Schimmel and Edna F. Ponder, both of Stroud Twp.; Kathryn B. Rohlfing, Smithfield Twp.; Ernest Price, Jackson Twp.; Albert Altomus, Ross Twp.; Raymond M. Andrews, Polk Twp.; and William J. Bossett, Pocono Twp.

John Uporsky
Delaware Water Gap police chief

Gap police chief happy in new job

DELAWARE WATER GAP — Delaware Water Gap once again has a fulltime chief of police. He is John Uporsky of Columbia, R. D., N. J.

"I've been on the job quite awhile and what I have seen of Delaware Water Gap and its people I like," Uporsky said.

"I have been looking for a house to buy or a piece of land to buy and when I find one or the other I'll move my wife and son into the area. It seems that the only problem I have with this job is to find a place to move or build," he concluded.

Uporsky lives about a mile north of the former Harry's Farm in Pahaquarry Township in New Jersey. He has had no formal training as a police officer but has served as a constable in that township for more than 10 years.

He has worked with New Jersey State Police on several cases.

"Between my practical experience, reading books, and information my brother (an officer in Smithtown, N. Y., police department) has given me — this is my knowledge of police work. However, I do plan attending as many police schools as my time and this job will permit," Uporsky said.

Uporsky is a tall man, a broad smile on his face and has a warm personality.

Ray Welsh returns to ESSC campus

EAST STROUDSBURG — A former East Stroudsburg State College basketball coach and a scout for two National League baseball teams goes back to school today as supervisor of student teachers in the health and physical education department of ESSC.

Ray Welsh of Fritz Ave., Stroudsburg, will supervise student teaching for the second semester at ESSC, according to Lester Bowers, director of student teaching.

"One of the main purposes of student teaching is for the student to learn to teach under supervision," Bowers said in outlining Welsh's duties.

"A college supervisor visits and observes student teachers while they're teaching," Bowers said. "The supervisor also assists the student teacher in planning and presentation."

Welsh, who coached for the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates, received his

Ray Welsh

Bachelor of Science Degree from Waynesburg College, Waynesburg, in 1928.

Welsh earned his Master of Arts Degree at the University of Pittsburgh. He coached basketball at North Union High School, Uniontown, Pa.; Sayre High School, Sayre, Pa., where he won eight championships in nine years; and Bridgeton High School, Bridgeton, N. J.

He also coached basketball at ESSC from 1948-1951 and Scranton University in 1958.

He served as head of the East Orange High School Physical Education Department for seven years, a post which he held until 1957 when he returned to this area to set up a Health and Physical Education Department at Notre Dame High School.

During his reign at East Orange he received the 1967 Honor Award Fellowship for Outstanding Service in Health and Physical Education by the New Jersey State Association of Health and Physical Education.

Sebring has also asked that each of the four school districts in Monroe County take a formal vote on the future of the vo-tech plan during their February meetings.

The convention on Jan. 30 will take place in Stroudsburg High School at 8 p.m.

Area teacher at meeting

CINCINNATI, Ohio — David L. Terrill, a member of the East Stroudsburg Education Assn., was one of 250 educators to attend a three-day Teachers-in-Politics clinic in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The clinic was sponsored by Ohio Education Assn., Cincinnati Teachers Assn., and the Citizenship Committee of the National Education Assn.

Two clubs planning music show

STROUDSBURG — The Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Loyal Order of Moose, both of Stroudsburg, will present an "All Star Country and Western Show" on Sunday, April 13, at the Sherman Theatre, Stroudsburg.

There will be an afternoon and evening show. The afternoon show will start at 2 p.m. and the evening show will begin at 8 p.m.

The show will feature such stars as "The Compton Brothers" and their band from Nashville and "Shot Jackson" and "Donna Darlene" from Wheeling, West Virginia.

Superintendent-elect to revamp Stroudsburg school administration

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg Area School District Superintendent-elect Samuel O. Wells III is proposing an administrative staff realignment based on efficiency of operation in which two assistant superintendents will be added to the superintendent's office.

Discussing the proposed realignment Tuesday, Wells said that one assistant superintendent will be in charge of curriculum and supervision and the other in charge of pupil services.

Both assistant superintendents will be chosen from within the existing school district administrative staff, Wells said.

Wells is also proposing to hire an additional elementary school principal so that there will be an elementary principal for each one of the five elementary schools in the district.

Wells' proposals will be considered by the board at its regular February meeting.

The duties of the assistant superintendent in charge of curriculum and supervision involve an evaluation of the teaching staff and school district programs.

He will be in charge of the kindergarten through 12 grade curriculum; coordinating curricular activities of departments and district schools and head in-service training programs.

The assistant to the supervisor in charge of pupil services will coordinate the guidance program and act as liaison man with the school physician, nurses, dental hygienist and the school psychologist.

He will also be in charge of public relations, and be responsible for implementation of federal projects, federal funds, development and evaluation of the federal program.

With the hiring of the fifth elementary supervisor, Wells will then launch what he believes is a unique system in the immediate education area, a system in which the five elementary principals would act as separate and distinct specialists in basic elementary school area subject matter.

Each one of the five principals would be a specialist in the following areas: reading, language, arts, mathematics, social studies and science.

This plan would serve a dual purpose, according to Wells. It would give the school district what larger schools have, specialists in the above basic subject matter areas. But where Wells' plan differs even from the larger schools is that the specialists would also be principals.

The five principals would be in charge of their respective elementary schools in the morning, in the afternoon, each principal would become a subject matter specialist, going from school to school to administer his specific subject matter, so in a week he could cover the five elementary schools.

With this method, each elementary school would have a different specialist each day in reading, language, arts, mathematics, social studies and science.

Wells feels that in the long run, his method will result in a stronger school system in which elementary principals will be generated by the added challenge of rendering specialist services in familiar subject matter within the existing framework of the five elementary schools.

Building injunction sought

STROUDSBURG — Attorney Joseph McCuskey, representing Eighteen North 7th Street, Inc., Tuesday presented a petition to Monroe County Judge Arlington W. Williams requesting an injunction against the construction of a new building, by Bensinger and Bensinger, 10 N. 7th St., Stroudsburg.

Judge Williams said Tuesday the petition is under consideration, but declined to comment when the court might issue an order in any direction.

In an appeal filed Monday with the Stroudsburg Zoning Board of Adjustment, John Valence, president of the corporation, claimed the issuance of the variance permitting the construction was illegal and unconstitutional.

The appeal was based primarily on the argument that no public hearing was held nor any notification received by Valence of the variance of the variance was not in accordance with the Stroudsburg Zoning Ordinance. Hence the illegality and unconstitutionality aspect.

Alex Bensinger Tuesday said, "I have no statement to make at this time." Charles Bensinger is currently out of town and unavailable for comment.

A borough official, who wished to remain anonymous, said that no public hearing had been held, no public notice was made and that Valence, as an interested party, received no notification of the request for a variance which is affecting his property.

Walter Peeney Jr., one of three members of the Stroudsburg Zoning Board of Adjustment, said, "I have no comment to make at this time." David Warrick, also a member of the board, said Tuesday that he had no comment to make at this time. However, he did indicate that he knew nothing of the variance request at the time it was made. The request was made in May, 1968.

Sumner Bossler Jr., the third member of the board was unavailable for comment on both Monday and Tuesday.

Lions to meet

TOBYHANNA — The Tobyhanna-Newfoundland Lions Club will meet Tuesday, Jan. 28, for a dinner meeting in The Lancaster, South Sterling.

Authority defers action on company's building plan

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Monroe County Redevelopment Authority deferred action Tuesday on the revised plans of the Redmond Finishing Company's new plant expected to be built on the Lincoln Ave. project.

Leon Zacher, chairman of East Stroudsburg Planning Commission, discussed with the redevelopment authority the proposed plan changes submitted to the commission by the textile corporation.

No action was taken by the redevelopment authority until formal approval is given by the East Stroudsburg Planning Commission and Borough Council.

King Beers, authority executive director, said he will meet with the planning group and the council on Tuesday when the revised plans will be formally submitted for action by the borough council.

"I feel the plan can be approved, subject to some minor changes," Beers said.

Beers informed authority members that the plans and budget for the Lincoln Ave. project, as amended, are completed. This includes certain parcels of the project changed from industrial to commercial subdivision.

Beers also reported that as soon as he is able to get a disposition contract signed by Allstate Developers, Inc., of Liberty, N.Y., he will proceed to advertise for a public hearing. Allstate is planning to construct a shopping center in the Lincoln Ave. project.

Beers said he had anticipated receiving the disposition contract by mid-January and now hopes he will advertise the hearing by the end of the month. The plan will then be submitted to the federal government.

In his project improvement report, Beers outlined four subject items which the authority plans to install at an estimated cost of $120,690. They are:

—To rebuild Lincoln Ave. at its present width and expand a beautification program to include planting as many trees as possible.

—To install a storm sewer system along the boundaries of Erie-Lackawanna Railway and the shopping plaza section, to eventually lead to the Dike along the outside boundary of the project.

With the hiring of an additional elementary principal, the Stroudsburg district administrative staff would total 11 members.

There would be the superintendent and his two assistants, the high school principal and his two assistants, and the five elementary school principals.

The minimum school administrative staff-pupil ratio recommended by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction is one staff member to 300 students, Wells said.

Wells admitted that a Stroudsburg administrative staff-pupil ratio of 11 staff members to 3,500 students is about one staff member to 318 students, and that this ratio is slightly higher than the recommended minimum ratio of one staff member to 300 students.

But with the present pupil enrollment in the school district and the constant problem of finance, Wells believes that his plan is the best avenue of approach to giving students the finest possible education, considering the barriers of restricted school revenue and small pupil enrollment.

Wells said the board is meeting tonight with the last of the six architect firms interested in building the proposed Middle School.

According to Wells' calculations, Stroudsburg's Middle School will begin construction in 1972.

Rumors explained in death

STROUDSBURG — Frank Perry, 61, was buried Tuesday and rumors have circulated since news of his death became public information.

Wilson MacIntire, Marshalls Creek, on whose property Perry fell, said he would tell the story in an effort to end the rumors. Several of Perry's brothers refused to comment on the subject.

According to MacIntire, his son, Joseph, and his family, had arrived at the MacIntire home late Tuesday night and "we sat up and talked as Joe had just come in from Florida," MacIntire said.

"It was late when we went to bed and due to Joe's late arrival we put them up for the night on beds in the den of our home," MacIntire explained.

"Joe heard footsteps about 2:30 a.m. in the yard in front of the home. He listened and they kept coming closer and closer and finally up on the front porch of the home and then they opened a screen door which was locked. The door is not used by our family."

"Joe hollered something at them and two of the men turned and ran down the front porch steps. The third man, who we found later was Perry, turned another direction and ran. He apparently tripped over a flower box on the porch and fell about four feet to the ground."

"Joe grabbed a shotgun as he thought someone was attempting to break into the house. He ran outside and found Perry lying on his back. He did not see the other two men but called out 'I've got a shotgun and will use it.'"

"The other two men, whose names I do not know, came forward."

"They told me they were taking Perry home and that he had told them he lived in the big white house across from Stanky's Hotel. We have found out since then that Perry did rent a room in the home of our neighbors, the name is not important."

"When I came out Perry was still lying on the ground. I could see that his nose was bleeding. We got a blanket from in the house and covered Perry as it was cold."

Police called "While this was going on State Police from Stroudsburg were called and they came out to investigate. After they arrived, the ambulance from the hospital was called and Perry was taken there."

"Wednesday, when I went to work, I'm employed at the hospital. I inquired about Perry's condition. It was at this time I learned the man had broken his neck and that about 24 stitches were required to close the cut on his face."

"It was shortly after that, that I was informed Perry was being transferred to Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia where he later died," MacIntire concluded.

State Police Tuesday night had no comment except to say that the case is still under investigation.

E-burg fire report given

EAST STROUDSBURG — Acme Hose Co. Fire Chief Robert Lesoine Monday night gave his year-end fire report during meeting of the fire company, East Stroudsburg.

According to Lesoine there were 53 alarms during 1968. The total value of property involved in the fires amounted to $154,450 and the total loss, due to the fires, is $15,115.

In a breakdown of the 53 alarms, his report showed 10 buildings, 17 automobiles, 12 grass fires, one gas leak, two railroad cars, three electrical, five false alarms, one television, and two oil burners.

County's realtors receive new charter, chapter name

STROUDSBURG — Pocono Mountains Real Estate Board, organized in 1926, recently received a new charter from the National Association of Real Estate Boards, changing its name to Pocono Mountains Board of Realtors.

The new charter was presented at the board's meeting held at the Beaver House Tuesday by outgoing president Clarence A. Majer, to incoming president Forrest R. Smith and vice president Harold L. Heberling.

The name was changed in conformation to the more generally accepted naming of "realtor boards" today. The Pocono Mountains Board is one of the oldest in the country.

Among the originators of the board is Dale H. Learn, East Stroudsburg realtor, who still remains active in the board.

Other 1969 officers are Jack

Muehlan, secretary-treasurer, and Wally Butz, assistant secretary-treasurer.

The Pocono Mountains Board jurisdiction for membership and responsibility for the protection of the property right of the National Association term "realtor," covers all of Monroe and Pike counties.

Plans are being made for the Pennsylvania Realtors District. One conference to be held at the Inn at Buck Hill Falls on April 23 in conjunction with the state association and district one vice-president, Edward Cniger of Bethlehem.

A full day workshop for realtors and their salesmen with speeches and round table discussions on a variety of subjects such as sales agreement and listing contracts with area attorneys and realtors; licensing law with members of the State Real Estate Commission present; and multi-leasing and appraising.

Two speakers will be State President William A. Lockhard, Jr., of Philadelphia, and Robert W. Semenov of Pittsburgh, author of several books used by the real estate profession.

ESSC dean dies at office desk

EAST STROUDSBURG — Dr. Theodore M. Moore, Stroudsburg R. D. 1, director of admissions at East Stroudsburg State College, died Monday in his office at his desk from an apparent heart attack.

Dr. Moore was a member of East Stroudsburg State College faculty since 1951 when he came here from College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va.

His first assignment at ESSC was dean of instruction. During the school year of 1955-56 he served as dean of instruction, acting president, and acting business manager and when Dr. LeRoy Koehler was named president he became dean of admissions.

He was awarded his bachelor's degree from Princeton University, his master's degree from Harvard University, and his doctorate from Cornell University. He also did graduate study at the University of Pennsylvania and University of Chicago.

Dr. Moore's professional career ranged from secondary teaching to college administration.

After two years of teaching in the public schools, he became head of the English department and assistant headmaster at Germantown Academy.

Before coming to ESSC, he was head of the English department, administrative assistant and director of summer school at the College of William and Mary.

Dr. Moore was a member of the Session of First Prebyterian Church of Stroudsburg, was superintendent of the church Sunday school, a member of National Education Assn., and Pennsylvania State Education Assn.

Dr. Theodore M. Moore

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Kurtz Moore, at home; a son, John Berryman Moore, Wilmington, Del., and a brother, Robert Moore, Danville.

Services will be held Friday at 2 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church, Stroudsburg, with the Rev. J. William Giles and the Rev. George J. Peters officiating.

Private burial will be in Prospect Cemetery, East Stroudsburg.

There will be no visitation. William R. Thomas Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Campanella, Musial elected to Hall of Fame

Stan's majority vote was 93.2

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stan Musial and Roy Campanella were voted into the Hall of Fame by the Baseball Writers of America Tuesday.

The former Cardinal great is only the fourth player in history to be chosen in his first year of eligibility. The others were Ted Williams of Boston, Jackie Robinson of Brooklyn and Bob Feller of Cleveland.

Campanella, suffering from the flu, called the honor "pretty good tonic" and said he was "more than proud" of his selection to the shrine at Cooperstown, N.Y.

"I never had any idea I'd even play in the majors, much less make the Hall of Fame," said Campanella, who joins former teammates Robinson as the only Negroes in the Hall. "It shows we're living in the right country," said the popular Campy, one of the pioneers of integration in major league baseball.

Musial, believed to have one of the best chances at unanimous selection, fell short of the mark, receiving 93.2 percent of the votes cast. The figure was only one tenth of a percent off the all time high of 93.3 set by Williams, called by Musial, "the greatest hitter I've ever seen."

Musial, who retired following the 1963 season after 22 years with the Cardinals, holds more individual records than any other player in the game.

The National League's Most Valuable Player in 1943, '46 and '48 and seven times the NL batting champion, Musial had more hits 3,636 than anyone in league history. Only the great Ty Cobb with 4,191 surpassed the amiable St. Louis star.

Musial drove in 100 or more runs in 10 seasons and hit 475 home runs during his career.

Campanella, his great career cut short by a tragic auto accident in January, 1958, played for 10 years with the great Brooklyn teams of the late '40s and early '50s. The league's MVP in 1951, 1953 and 1955, Campanella hit 41 home runs during 1953, his finest season, to set a major league record for catchers.

He batted .312 that season and drove in 142 runs, also a record for a catcher.

Campanella hit 242 home runs during his career with Brooklyn, driving in 856 runs and amassing a lifetime batting average of .276. A hand injury late in his career lowered his career average considerably.

Despite their achievements with the bat, both Musial and Campanella were outstanding defensive players. Musial, who led the league in total bases and slugging percentage six times, led NL outfielders in fielding three times. He led outfielders in double plays one season and turned the trick again as a first baseman.

Campanella, who caught six no hit games and handled Dodger pitching great Sandy Koufax in his major league debut, led NL catchers for six years in chances accepted and put outs. Musial, whose 22 years with the Cardinals tied a major league record, attributed his tremendous endurance to "peak physical conditioning. I guess advanced training techniques added five years to my playing career," explained Musial.

Musial also admitted that he had his doubts about ever making it to the majors, hoping "to be able to play about 10 years or so. I never in my wildest dreams thought about the Hall of Fame in those early days."

He said he "wasn't concerned" about missing as a unanimous choice. "In this country the majority rules," he said. "I'm just happy to go in with the majority."

Campanella, his eyes a bit teary, said the honor "completes my baseball career. I've left all my disappointments behind me."

Musial, a product of Donora, Pa., deep in the coal mining area, broke into organized baseball in 1938 as a scatter-armed left-handed pitcher earning $65 a month in the St. Louis organization.

While filling in as an outfielder in Florida, Musial's spikes caught as he attempted a diving catch and he injured his left arm severely. His undistinguished pitching career virtually ended, Musial concentrated on hitting, perfecting the famed corkscrew batting stance which he once described as "a thief running away from a policeman and looking back over his shoulder."

Musial, blessed with tremendous wrists and fantastic vision, immediately began to make his presence felt in the St. Louis organization. Called up briefly in 1941, he batted .246 in 12 games.

He became a regular a year later and batted .315 and in 1943 captured the first of his three MVP awards. That year Musial, at .22, batted .357 to lead the league and was high in hits (220) doubles (48) and triples (20).

He batted over .300 for 17 consecutive seasons, dipping to .255 in 1959. Three years later, at age 42, Stan the Man batted .330.

Roy Campanella, former Brooklyn Dodger catcher, is congratulated by Monte Irwin, Commissioner William Eckert and Elston Howard, left to right, after he was named to baseball's Hall of Fame Tuesday. During his 10 years with the Dodgers, he was named the league's Most Valuable Player three times. His career came to a tragic end when his car skidded on ice and crashed in 1958. (UPI Telephoto)

Musial, who played with the Cardinals for 22 years, received 93 percent of the votes by sports writers who cast ballots in the election. (UPI Telephoto)

Musial celebrates election with steak, champagne

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Stan "The Man" Musial, the picture of health on his smiling face, staged a champagne and steak party Tuesday to mark his election to the Hall of Fame and said, "this is one of the highest honors in baseball."

The 48-year-old Musial, now a grandfather, started and ended a baseball career with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I've had 22 years to look back with satisfaction," Musial said, recalling his first job in a unanimous vote, as some reports had predicted.

"I'm not concerned about that," Musial said, in one of his serious moods. "In this country majority rules, and I'm happy to go in on the majority."

Musial joked throughout most of the 40-minute telephone hookup. At one time, commenting on Campanella's selection, he said, "Campanella was very gabby at the plate."

Musial said that when the Cardinals played the Brooklyn Dodgers, Campanella "would tell me a lot of things while I was hitting...how they're going to try something different on me."

"But he (Campanella) never said anything while I was crossing Home Plate," Musial laughed.

Musial sat next to Cardinal batting instructor Joe Medwick, who was elected to the Hall of Fame last year.

Medwick, also a former minor league baseball as "a wild pitcher" at age 20.

"I would walk 10 or 11 a game, I didn't have it as a pitcher," Musial recalled.

Musial learned of his selection with Roy Campanella, former Brooklyn Dodger catcher, on a telephone hookup from New York City. Then, he invited the crowd in the Busch Stadium dining room to his restaurant "for champagne and steak."

Musial said he wasn't disturbed that he failed to receive Cardinal great, said, "it took me 20 years to get in, and I know how Stan feels." Medwick said, "this is a climax to his career."

Musial said he "lost a lot of time" starting out as a pitcher, but then he smilingly compared himself to Babe Ruth and George Sisler, saying, "they started out as pitchers, too."

Musial said that when he started as a $65 a month pitcher, "I never did think about making the Hall of Fame."

Musial said that his "physical makeup" which he said enabled him to play baseball, "is kind of God-given."

He recalled that his last two or three years in baseball "became a struggle."

"I would recommend that fellows not play at ages 42 and 43," Musial smiled.

Musial described his 330 hitting at age 42, as "quite a feat." Then, he laughed, telling how in the Spring he went to see the eye doctor, "because the ball seemed to be getting smaller."

"I was disappointed when the doctor said I didn't need glasses," Musial said. "What were his greatest thrills, he was asked."

"Putting on a baseball uniform was one of them," The Man said.

Combination chart indicates daily closing stock indexes over a period of a month. United Press International Indicator is based on the net percentage change of all issues traded of the 1,675 stocks listed on the Big Board. New York Stock Exchange Index is based only on common shares, weighted by the number of listed shares of each stock and expressed in dollars and cents. American Stock Exchange Index is based on net change of all ASE stocks and warrants divided by the number of issues traded and is expressed in dollars and cents.

Investors mark time

Profit taking prevails

NEW YORK (UPI)—A stock market standoff lasted more than three hours Monday before grudgingly giving ground under late profit taking. Trading was relatively light.

Despite the heartening developments at the Vietnam conference in Paris over the weekend, many investors apparently were marking time until the policies of the new Republican administration in Washington are spelled out more clearly.

The Vietnam negotiators took surprisingly little time in ironing out their procedural differences over the weekend and political discussions on the settlement of the war are now scheduled to begin this Saturday.

Some bearish sentiment also seemed reflected in the record monthly decline in short interest, price reductions in sulphur and a rollback in zinc quotations.

The UPI stock market indicator, measuring all stocks traded, was off 0.05 per cent on 1,586 issues crossing the tape. Declines edged advances 716 to 617. There were 25 new highs and 13 new lows.

The New York Stock Exchange index mirrored a loss of four cents in the average common share price.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue chip industrials showed a loss of 1.43 to 929.82. DJ rails also declined, but the utilities moved ahead.

Turnover totaled 10,910,000 shares, down slightly from the 10,950,000 shares on Monday.

INA Corp. headed the list of 15 most active issues which included 12 losers and three winners. INA dipped 3/4 to 46 1/2 on 269,100 shares, including two blocks totaling 46,900 shares at 46 and 47. Word circulated that Levin-Townsend Computer Corp. has prepared an offer to purchase the insurance holding company.

Goodrich, which failed to open in the previous session, held second place among the active, climbing 1/4 to 64 1/2 on 239,100 shares. Northwest Industries, a holding company, has announced plans for a tender offer for the rubber firm.

Northwest lost 3/4 after climbing more than 6 on Monday.

AMK Corp., which recently sweetened its offer for United Fruit, was third on the active list, dipping 1/4 to 50 on 204,900 shares, including a block of 46,500 shares at 49 1/2, and four blocks totaling 43,900 shares at 48 1/2 to 50.

United Fruit gave up 1/2. Zapata Norwest, also seeking the banana firm's stock, fell 1 point.

American Airlines, the most heavily traded issue in its group, dropped 1 1/2. KLM, rose 1 following a favorable earnings forecast for the year ended March 31. This group generally has moved ahead smartly in recent sessions following the Civil Aeronautics Board's tentative approval of air fare boosts beginning in March.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Jim Mithum and his longrun beauty Wendy Wagner will wed . . . Jim's pop Bob Mithum had this no doubt compliment for acting schools: "They keep kids off the street" . . . When Fortune magazine reserached its "21" Club article the writer discovered (but didn't include) this fact: 200 Time-Life-Fortune executives have "21" charge accounts.

Wait'll you see French ex sex symbol Jean Gabin in "The Tattooed Man": fat as (Gleason) . . . Fine jazz pianist Marian McPartland makes her classical debut Jan. 25 with the Westchester Symphony playing her symphonically scored original composition "With You In Mind," and for encores the Beatles' "Eleanor Rigby" arranged plitharmonically . . . Barbara Parkins who'd been dating Omar Sharif shifted to Yves Montand so Omar told that past tense and dated Sandra Scott.

Some of his doctors say Peter Sellers doesn't remember how well they saved his life . . . Joey Bishop gives Vietnam a replay in early spring . . . Tommy Smothers of the brothers is being offered to films solo . . . Young singer Bobby Vinton will be chairman of Nixon's Youth Foundation (for poverty-kids).

When David Brinkley says "Goodnight Chet" he'll be heading for beddy-bye in his new Sutton Place South pad; David's a 22-year marriage dropout . . . Break out the cigars: George Burns hit 73 . . . Pat Neal, 43 the same day.

Maximilian Schell plans a London "Hamlet" played as a student revolutionary; and he's putting up all the money! . . . Meanwhile, back at the Bard, dear old Dr. Kildare, Richard Chamberlain, also plans a London "Hamlet."

Louis Osman into hiding — while designing the crown that Prince Charles will sport for his Prince of Wales investiture later this year.

Tony Curtis' ex-wife Christine Kaufman will wed European photog Thomas Barbu in March . . . George Jessel, now 71, at the Camelot displayed his new overcoat — electrically heated . . . Greenwich Village smut sheet carries this frontpage label: "All The Nudes Fit to Print"; most of them aren't.

Photog Jerry Engel who took much Sinatra verbal abuse when he tried to photograph him during his Mia-honeymoon reports he got an autograph during the Waldorf Astronauts dinner from The Chairman of the Bored who then recognized Jerry and hurled a replay of the honeymooning invective . . . Jim Arness' No. 1 is Thordis Brandt . . . Edison Rynn House is a dandy pre-or-post theatre spot . . . Nothing's wasted: fellow bought up seats of old nicledeon theatre seats from silent-screen days, all more than 50 years old and sells them to nostalgics, three for $50.

Making "The Oblong Box" in Dublin, Vincent Price is staying at a very plush flat — former site of the city's biggest bordello, famed also from James Joyce tales . . . After Loew's Hotels topshots scratched their executive noggins trying to find a name for the Warwick Hotel's new bar, the brainstorming conclusion — "The Warwick Bar" . . . Loew's Pres. Bob Tisch had a survey made and discovered he could make more profits with the bar than with the bank that had been there for years.

"Golden Rainbow" closed after a year of advertising itself as a "smash hit" which it never was: it dropped $400,000 and started the Little League Lunts. The Steve Lawrence's.

Adam Clayton Powell told Merv Griffin: "The nearest thing to a leader that we have in the U.S. today — white or black — is Ted Kennedy."

We asked Sidney Blackmer if he planned to retire after 55 thespian years: "I'm too old to retire" snapped the septuagenarian.

Johnny Barracuda thought he had a job good for at least a few weeks at the African Room — and now he's been there just 12 years as his headliner . . . Richard Wilson differed over how to direct Universal's "Skulduggery" movie in Jamaica, West Indies, so now Gordon Douglas is directing . . . The special underwater effects has "Ice Station Zebra" expecting an Academy Award.

Durward Kirby's "Tonight" shows may be his last in the East: he just bought a $100,000 Beverly Hills lean-to.

Stripper Sherry Britton can't keep her romance with Larry Blyden covered up; they were at Network 55 a few sicks ago . . . Sherry's all signed for a summer tour in "Gems of Burlesque" . . . Seems a straight strip-burlesque can't make it; it must suggest it's the best of the past . . . True enough — the current N.Y. area burley jennies are sleazy bores.

Watch the Italian anti-defamation outfits toss a few mamamias: the forthcoming film about Christopher Columbus will portray him with an illegitimate son who accompanied Dad on his cruises.

Caesars Palace in Vegas now has a $5 slot machine . . . That accepts bills . . .

Sen. Wood sponsors bill to lower voting age to 19

HARRISBURG — Sentiment is mushrooming across the state behind Senate Bill two, proposing an amendment to the Constitution reducing the voting age from 21 years to 19. Sen. T. Newell Wood reported from Harrisburg Tuesday.

Sen. Wood co-sponsored the bill earlier this month and it was later referred to the rules committee.

Co-sponsoring the bill with Wood are Senator Stanley G. Stroup, Bedford, GOP majority leader; John H. Ware, Chester; Clarence D. Bell, Delaware; R.D. Fleming, Allegheny, president pro tempore, and James F. Willard, Mercer.

In reducing the age requirement from 21 to 19 years, the resolution calls for an amendment to article seven.

Under the amendment, Senator Wood explained, section one which spells out the qualifications, would be changed to read: "Every citizen 'nineteen' years of age, possessing the following qualifications shall be entitled to vote at all elections subject, however, to such laws requiring and regulating the registration of electors as the General Assembly may enact."

This proposed change in the voting age appears in tempo with the demands before state legislatures across the country. Legislators are being confronted with support representing all age brackets asking that the voting age be reduced, Wood said.

Wood said he was delighted to observe the favorable editorial comment from some of the leading newspapers in his district. He indicated that this same spirit of response appears evident through the state as individuals and organizations line up their forces for the new vote age.

The senator added he would be pleased to hear from the residents of his district.
